I believe I have the experience of managing large and complex budgets in a large organisation and the responsibility that this challenge presents. Have been involved with British Cycling for a number of years and a current Board member, as such I am aware of the number of challenges this brings, not just to British Cycling but also the wider cycling infrastructure, particularly at the performance and competition aspect of cycling.

During my latter years in the prison service had to manage and implement significant reductions to the prison budget and see first hand the impact it can have to the service provision and also the effect to its workforce. I believe that one benefit that this can bring is the requirement to analyse what we do-how we do it and look at other ways that we could approach a change agenda and progress.
